

Annuitization payment options guide

All you need to know about your annuitization options

When your contract reaches its maturity date, it can be annuitized. Annuitization is when your accumulated contract value is converted into a stream of periodic payments. Your payment options are based on the type of your annuity contract product.

Refer to the charts within this guide to determine the payment options available to you. Note that we may reduce the period certain on qualified accounts if it exceeds their life expectancy based on IRS tables. Included in the last page of this guide is a glossary of terms for your reference.

Important: Once you choose to annuitize, that decision is irrevocable.

Update Contract Maturity Information

New Maturity Age:
 A new maturity age has been set to our maximum allowable age of 100. If you would like to elect an alternative age, please enter that age above. We use the maturity age to determine the new contract maturity date.

By submitting this transaction I authorize John Hancock to defer annuitization. I understand that dates of maturity that occur when the oldest of either the annuitant or co-annuitants is at an advanced age, e.g., past age 95, may have adverse tax consequences. Please consult with your tax professional for advice on any tax matter.

³ Not all annuitization options may be available for all products.

⁴ Only available for SPDA and SPDA2.

⁵ Only available for SMRA.

⁶ Not all annuitized contracts are eligible for EFT.

Glossary of terms

Accumulation—While an annuity contract is in force but not annuitized, investment units are accumulated, and the contract owner has control of the annuity contract, meaning that withdrawals may be taken, units are accumulated, death benefits are available, additional payments can be made, and the annuity contract can be surrendered or annuitized.

Annuitant—The individual whose lifetime is used to measure the length of time annuitized payments are payable under the annuity contract and who has no rights under the contract unless they are also an owner. The annuitant becomes the owner of the contract during the annuitization phase. The owner stays the owner on legacy contracts, even when annuitized.

Annuitization—The period when an annuity's accumulated contract value is converted into a stream of periodic payments, either for the annuitant's and/or co-annuitant's lifetime or for a period-certain (specific period of time, wherein if death occurs, the remaining payments are passed along to beneficiaries), and the contract owner no longer has access to that contract value.

Beneficiary—A person or entity named by the contract owner to receive any benefits due upon the contract owner's or, in certain circumstances, the annuitant's death.

Joint life—Payments continue for the life of an annuitant and co-annuitant.

Joint life ½ survivor—Half of the payment amount due continues to the surviving annuitant for their life upon either annuitant's death.

Joint life ⅔ survivor—Two-thirds of the payment amount due continues to the surviving annuitant for their life upon either annuitant's death.

Joint life with no refund—Payments are made for the life of both annuitants. Upon the death of an annuitant, payments continue to the surviving annuitant. Upon the death of the surviving annuitant, no further payments are due.

Joint life with cash refund—An additional payment is made to the beneficiaries if a balance remains between total payments and the initial investment once both annuitants have passed.

Joint life with X years guaranteed—Payments are made for the life of both annuitants. Upon the death of an annuitant, payments continue to the surviving annuitant. Upon the death of the surviving annuitant within the X-year guarantee period, the death benefit is payable to the beneficiary. Upon the death of the surviving annuitant after the X-year guarantee period, no further payments are due.

Life with X years guaranteed—Payments are made for the annuitant's lifetime. Upon the death of the annuitant within the X-year guarantee period, the death benefit is payable to the beneficiary. Upon the death of the annuitant after the X-year guarantee period, no further payments are due.

Life with cash refund—An additional payment is made to the beneficiaries if a balance remains between total payments and the initial investment when the annuitant passes.

Life with installment refund—Payments will continue to the beneficiary until the annuitized amount has been completely paid out if the annuitant passes before the annuitized amount has been paid in full.

Life with no refund—Payments are made for the annuitant's life and cease upon the death of the annuitant with no further payments due.

Maturity date—The date selected by the contract owner during the application process (but may be extended under certain circumstances) on which the annuity contract transitions from the accumulation phase to the annuitization phase.

Set period between X-XX years—Payments are made for a specific period of time. Upon the annuitant's death prior to the end of the payment term, the death benefit is payable to the beneficiary.
